TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1855.

In the first place it is contended that the Republican party are aiming at and desire a dissolution of the Union, or a severance of the ties that bind the North to the South. We are charged with favoring aggressive measures, and laboring to insult the people of the Southern States. No facts are presented to sustain the various assertions that are heaped one upon another day after day, in support of these charges; and pro-slavery writers, if they are capable of comprehending the meaning of language, must be aware of the fact that the people of Ohio do not in the least degree favor aggression upon the Southern States. The platform adopted by the American Convention at Cleveland and the resolutions passed by the Columbus Convention are plain enough on this point.

The position of the Anti-Nebraska party is clearly stated to be non-interference with the constitutional rights of the South, but united and determined opposition to the further extension of slavery. This is our platform, and it is upon this, so far as regards the slavery question, that the battle must be fought.—Cincinnati Gazette.

The entire press in the Northern States that favor the new Abolition party, which has lately assumed the name of "Republican," abound with passages like this taken from the Gazette. At the logic of this party Southern men are amazed, and are at a loss whether to attribute their strange proposition to cool impudence or ignorant simplicity—we beg pardon if the terms are harsh. This Cincinnati editor, for instance, tells the South with all the apparent earnestness of one who thinks himself vindicating truth and justice, that the anti-Nebraska party do not intend to interfere with the Constitutional rights of the South, but is determined that slavery shall not be extended over any more territory. It seems that this party entirely ignores any Constitutional right of the South to any participation in territory that may have been or that hereafter may be acquired by the United States, no matter how much territory the country may acquire. Southern blood or Southern treasure may be used to acquire it, yet, when it shall have been obtained, it must all be for the use and benefit of the people of the North. It is a libel on the justice and the intelligence of the framers of the Constitution to charge them with having framed a constitution and inaugurated a government capable of perpetrating a wrong so vile, or of sanctioning a principle so palpably unjust. A government, based upon a principle so unjust, so unequal in its operation, so injurious to a large portion of its own people, could not long exist, for the reason that it would not be worth preserving.

The people of the South hold that it would be an outrageous and insufferable violation of their Constitutional rights for the people of the North to deny admission to a State into the Union merely because it applied for admission with a constitution recognizing slavery. And it is mere mockery, the veriest trifling, for the editors of the Free-soil press to assert that such a course would not be, in spirit and in substance, an interference with the constitutional rights of the South. In the absence of any restriction in the Constitution of the right to make or admit slave States, the right exists in Congress, for the Constitution confers on Congress the right to admit new States, without any qualification as to whether they shall be free or slave States. Congress has no other power than merely to admit or exclude a State that asks to be admitted. There is nothing in the Constitution of the United States which gives to Congress the right to legislate as to what shall or shall not be property. Property, its rights, its duties, its description, and its liabilities, are all placed under the control and jurisdiction of the local governments. This is just as true of the territories as it is of the States, and no one questions the correctness of the proposition as to the States.

We presume that every one will admit that there is no power given by the Constitution to Congress to compel a territory to form itself into a State, adopt a constitution, and apply for admission. A territory may remain outside of the Union for one or for one hundred years, as its people shall elect. But the people must of necessity have a government during that time, and there is nothing to prevent them from forming one to suit their own views. In framing that government, the people will of course have the right to settle all questions and make all laws relating to property, defining what shall be property, and how it shall be held; and if in the exercise of that right they choose to establish property in slaves, they have the unquestionable right to do so. After they have done this, they have the right to ask for admission into the Union; and to refuse them merely because they had exercised an undoubted right, would be unjust, and contrary to the spirit of the Constitution. The practical and successful exercise of the power of the free States to prevent the admission of any more slave States would surely result sooner or later in the dissolution of the Union.

The New York Courier & Enquirer has a calm and dispassionate article upon the restoration of the Missouri compromise. That paper seems to suppose that even the next Congress may restore it. There is supposed to be a majority for it in the House, and the New York editor suggests that Senators Pugh of Ohio, Clayton of Delaware, Dodge of Wisconsin, Stewart of Michigan, Crittenden of Kentucky, of North Carolina, and Pierce of Maryland may vote in favor of it. Mr. Crittenden deprecated the repeal of the Missouri compromise, but we do not believe that he will go for the restoration, inasmuch as this would involve a breach of national faith toward the settlers in Kansas and Nebraska. We do not think there is a possibility of the next Senate's agreeing to the restoration, and even if such a bill were to be passed by both houses, it would certainly be arrested by the veto of President Pierce, whose hopes are all centered in the South.

In our opinion, the restoration of the Missouri compromise would, in its application to Kansas and Nebraska, be wrong, palpably wrong. Congress proclaimed last year to all who might go to Kansas and Nebraska, that they should have the right to decide by their own votes the question of slavery there. Under that assurance, many thousands of her sons have gone there, and now to deny them the right which Congress guaranteed to them would, in our view, be perjury and dishonor. Still we do not believe that the South should or would make the mere restoration of the compromise an occasion for the dissolution of the Union. If Kansas ask to be admitted into the Union as a slave State, and if Congress refuse to admit her as such, she can remain a territory for even an indefinite number of years without any very material damage to her own actual interests or the interests of the South.

This is very original and very handsomely done:

SONG OF THE GAS-LIGHT.

BY LAMP-LIGHTER.
Silently, patiently, all the night long,
Brightly I lighten the way of the throng;
Many the sights I see;
Many the deeds that be
Witnessed by only me,
Fearful and wrong.

Regal magnificence, splendor and show,
Beggary indigence, sorrow and woe,
Crime and its votaries,
Love and its ecstasies,
Fame and its devotees
Under me go.

Into the hall-room so mirthful and gay,
Into the hotel where revels decay,
Into the felon's cell,
Into the gambling hall—
Wherever man may dwell
Cast I my ray.

Mantled in beauty, the maid sinks to rest,
Placid her features and tranquil her breast,
Fanned by the zephyr's wing,
Breathing the sweets they bring,
Lulled by the lay they sing,
Happy and bliss.

Black as the plumes of midnight her hair
Waves over temple and shoulder, and there
Nestles her hand of snow,
Ripples her bosom's flow—
There is where we know
Faultless and fair.

Purest and loveliest and best of thy race!
Into thy chamber, that sanctified place,
Raptured, I fondly gaze,
Kissing thee with my rays,
Blessing each smile that plays
Over thy face!

That the Union will be destroyed we do not fear. That is a calamity which, while it has been constantly spoken of by designing politicians as a most practicable and imminent contingency, no man of sense can regard as within the compass of probability. We are free to confess that if interested and dishonest agitators could have realized their predictions, the federal bands that bind us in political unity, and constitute us one people, would have been severed long since. But the menaces and machinations of the whole crew of miserable demagogues who have habitually swaggered and declaimed about dissolving the relations of the States, as if the issue were absolutely within their control, have hitherto utterly failed, and they will continue to fail.—Albany Register.

We earnestly trust that the Union will not be dissolved, but our trust rests upon the hope that the Northern men will not be guilty of the outrages that some of them contemplate. If an abolition or free-soil party in the North, obtaining the control in Congress, were to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, to exclude slavery from all the territories, to enact that slavery should never be extended over another foot of ground, to repeal the fugitive slave law, to proclaim that no slave, after touching the soil of a free State, should ever be restored to his owner, and to adopt every possible means of insulting and harassing and injuring the South, does any dispassionate man believe that the union of the States would not be dissolved?

NIAGARA FALLS.—We learn that they are having gay and glorious times at Niagara. Those beautiful and magnificent hotels, the Cataract and International, on the American side, and the Clifton on the Canada side, are all thronged with delighted visitors.

We intend to make a visit to the Mammoth Cave, and then we hope to be off for the Clifton House, where some of the pleasantest days of our life have been spent. Ah, it is bliss even to imagine ourselves there, enjoying the luxuries of as fine a table as ever was set, enjoying nightly the music and the dance, wandering over the beautiful grounds starred with millions of flowers, feeling the breath of the fresh cool breezes upon our brow, gazing upon the mighty torrent enveloped in sprays and crowned with rainbows, and hearing even in our sleeping dreams the hoarse thunders of the cataract.—At the Clifton House the fervor of the summer is never felt.

KENTUCKY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The devotees of Pomona are becoming quite successful in their efforts to render the offerings from the fruit garden and orchard prominent attractions among the articles of beauty and interest which lend such resistless charms to the Society's weekly displays, and which were crowded in on Saturday last in such profusion as to elbow each other throughout the whole length and breadth of the Society's extended tables.

Apples, which, as we have heretofore remarked, have for some weeks been fine in the extreme, were no less so on Saturday; and some of the pears, then first appearing for the season, were splendid. We scarcely consider Bartlett, with its scarlet cheek, more beautiful than Tyson or than another fine-looking pear exhibited under the local name of "Bell Pear." This latter variety is a roundish, bergamot-shaped fruit of good size and well tasted—and beautiful besides.

On Saturday Rostiezer & Tyson, which close the list of summer fruits recommended for general cultivation by the National Pomological Society, first made their appearance. They are both excellent fruits, and will speedily win their way into general favor. The other summer varieties recommended by the National Society which have been exhibited here this season are Madeline, Bloodgood, and Dearborn's Seedling, each of which has been well esteemed by the fruit committee and received with much favor by crowds of examining visitors, circumstances calculated to do credit to the judgment of that very respectable body of intelligent and public-spirited cultivators who constitute the National Society.

Plums were exhibited in great variety, but except Bolmar's Washington, Jefferson and Duane's Purple we noticed nothing very fine.

Peaches will continue to improve both in size and appearance for some weeks yet to come until the later sorts begin to ripen. Among the best exhibited on Saturday, we would reckon Cole's Early Red, Crawford's Early, and a fine cling introduced into this vicinity by Wm. H. Pope, Esq. By the bye, Crawford's Early is some days in advance of its season, and was exhibited by a single cultivator whose trees are grown upon a sandy soil. The fruits, however, were very handsome and were evidently grown upon vigorous trees, though somewhat too hard to eat well.

We noticed, on the table, cantelopes and watermelons in considerable quantities, which were very good looking. We observed too some very fine specimens of figs and of foreign grapes.

Flowers, we regretted to see, have become very scarce. Midsummer heat and the state of the weather which, although it does not amount to a drought, is yet very dry, has reduced quite low the stock of roses outside the greenhouse, and has cut short that luxurious bloom which usually crowns the efforts of the cultivator of the hardy annual flowers.

The conduct of the Washington Union, the New York Tribune, and some other papers in publishing everything written by Mr. J. B. Clay in his late quarrel with us and giving only two or three sentences from what was written by us, just enough to make Mr. Clay's articles intelligible, involves an amount of meanness that no paper not lost to all sense of shame would be guilty of.

From the Washington Union we expected nothing better. We regard the editor of the Union as pretty much in the predicament of a man detected and exposed in an attempt to steal. He is the knave who undertook to abstract a good many thousands of dollars from the U. S. treasury upon an absurd and miserable semblance of a pretext which every member of a House of Representatives containing an overwhelming majority of his own political friends united in pronouncing a fraud and a humbug.

The editor of the Democrat thinks that we are lacking in veneration for Henry Clay because we do not coincide in each and every opinion ever expressed by him. The editor even quotes upon us the words of Christ—"If a man love me he will keep my words; he that loveth not me keepeth not my sayings." Much as we venerate the memory of Henry Clay, our soul is our own. The sentiments of the Democrat are worthy only of the heart and tongue of a bondsman.

GRAYSON SPRINGS.—Most of the old watering places in Kentucky are closed, but the Grayson Springs, so long a favorite resort of thousands of the ladies and gentlemen of Kentucky, are open. We are informed that the fine hotel there is doing a greater business than it has ever done before. And indeed the attractions, according to our information, are increased and multiplied. The Messrs. Clarkson, the noble and generous proprietors of the establishment, have now perfected the arrangements that they have long been contemplating. They have one of the most excellent bands of music to be found anywhere.

To invalids not less than to seekers after pleasure, Grayson Springs have always been a favorite retreat. The almost universal opinion both of medical men and others is that the waters surpass all others in the United States in their extraordinary curative powers. We understand that there is scarcely a chronic disease which they do not either cure or essentially mitigate.

The Grayson Springs are but twenty miles from the Mammoth Cave. We advise all, who go to one of these delightful resorts, to go to both. Only three or four hours are required for passing from one to the other.

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—As the elections are now over, the best advice that we can give to our friends is to make their escape from the city and find a cool and delicious retreat at the Mammoth Cave. The many who have been there during the present season bear witness that it is the most charming resort to be found anywhere in all this Western country. It combines all the attractions that could possibly be desired for a summer sojourn—to say nothing of the master attraction of one of the two greatest and most wondrous curiosities of our globe.

Fellow-citizens, take the fine stage line of Messrs. Carter & Thomas, and in one day you will find yourselves safely landed at the Cave. Go prepared to make a long stay, for you cannot come away without reluctance. Do not on any account take your own vehicles, for it would impose upon you much trouble and great expense of time and money.

CLAY MONUMENT.

MR. EDITOR:—In common with every intelligent man and warm admirer of the genius, worth, and services of our illustrious Henry Clay, I have felt, from the first moment it was proposed, a lively interest in this monument. Nothing doubting the patriotism and zeal with which it would be prosecuted, I must confess I felt a painful degree of anxiety as to the shape it would take, amid the conflicting tastes, humors, and interests which would be awakened in its progress; and have carefully read nearly every thing, I believe, which has been published on the subject. You can readily understand that this anxiety has not been abated one whit by what you say in your paper of the 2nd inst. Hoping almost against hope that I may be able to shed one feeble ray of light upon the subject, I modestly offer the following communication for your columns.

When in Lexington some months ago, I made diligent inquiries of those best informed upon the subject, inspected most of the numerous drawings and models, and must confess that I was highly delighted to find such unanimity upon several points upon which my own mind had settled down as cardinal points in the whole operation.

They were—1st. That the monument should include and protect a marble bust at least, or, still better, a marble statue of the illustrious dead. 2d. That, as a distinguished and finished Kentucky artist, was of course in my mind. 3d. Of course, and as a necessity, something in the form of a mausoleum, to shelter it from the weather. And 3d. And, almost as much a matter of course, something in the Gothic form. My own preference preponderated vastly in favor of something like the Edinboro' monument to Sir Walter Scott, which, beautiful as it appears in a drawing, I have been told by persons of highly cultivated taste is still more beautiful in itself. Not a few such who have traveled wide and far and seen most that is to be seen, pronounce it to be the finest monument in Europe.

Upon entering the room which contained it, my attention was instantly drawn to the design then partially fixed upon, of Mr. Hamilton, as being not only the finest thing in itself, but the only one fulfilling most of the above conditions. At first, indeed, I did not take it for Gothic, but rather for Saracenic, though perhaps I have an eye as highly educated in Gothic forms as most untraveled Americans. A little close inspection informed me that nearly all its details were strictly Gothic.

But that closer inspection was far from being entirely satisfactory: First, on account of that very want of boldness of character which rendered such a momentary mistake possible. In glancing at the Scott Monument there is no such danger. Secondly, on account of the impossibility of reconciling so much of the Saracenic Mausoleum form with the Gothic elevation and symmetry. Thirdly, and much more emphatically, on account of another and like consequence, the necessity of a roof and stained glass windows which, in my view, are utterly irreconcilable with the dignity, solidity, and almost imperishable permanence of such a monument.

If Mr. Hamilton's design were adopted, in my judgment an indispensable corollary from it would be the investment of one-fifth or one-tenth of the whole fund to defray the cost of repairs, and the creation of a perpetual corporation to take charge of them. And even then, the end of the whole thing would be the loss of the fund, the death of the trustees, and the speedy dilapidation of the monument.

I do not then entirely agree with the article in your paper of the 2d inst., so far as to regret that the partial decision in favor of Mr. H.'s design was not been confirmed.

And whilst I fully agree with you as to the loftiness, grandeur, and magnificence of the Monument to which Mr. Clay is entitled, and in the opinion that the nation is fully prepared to contribute almost any amount for that purpose, were proper measures set on foot to draw forth those contributions even to the extent of $150,000, which is said to have been the cost of Sir Walter Scott's monument; yet I must confess that my higher moral sense, would, by such an expenditure, be as much shocked by needless extravagance in one direction, as yours seems to have been, in an opposite direction, by a lofty and noble apprehension of meanness and parsimony, or even the possible suspicion of them.

I believe a monument, very much like that of Scott's, only more taper and graceful—more in the proportion of the tower and spire of St. Stephen's Church in Vienna, or of Trinity Church, New York, or Dr. Potts's Church, New York—all of which are massive stone to the very top of the cross—could be erected with a base of 20 or 30 feet and a height of two or three hundred, for less than $50,000.

LATEST NEWS.

THE RIOTS.—As we stated yesterday, there were several fist-fights at the different polls yesterday morning. Immediately after dinner matters assumed a more violent aspect. The first serious difficulty occurred in the upper part of the city. A couple of gentlemen were riding along in a carriage, when they were fired at from a house by Germans or Irish and one of them wounded. The firing was repeated. Ed. Williams, a watchman in the Second ward, Joseph Selva, and John Latta, Americans, went there. Latta had his leg shattered by a musket-ball, Selva received several buckshots about his body, and Williams was slightly injured.

The report reached the lower part of the city that six Americans had been shot and were lying in Dr. Pyles's office. This caused the assembling of a large crowd, which proceeded up town. The first attack made by the crowd was on a German named John Vogt, in a house from which shots had been fired upon Americans, on the corner of Clay and Madison. He was shot, stabbed, and beaten. Another German, named Jacob, who was sitting on a staircase, was dragged out, stabbed, and beaten. His recovery is doubtful. Everything in the lower part of the house was broken to pieces.

The crowd proceeded to the corner of Madison and Shelby, where firing from the houses had taken place, and they riddled two groceries. A German ropemaker named Hein, who was walking along the street, was beset by the crowd and terribly beaten.

The crowd then ransacked a German beer-house, corner of Walnut and Shelby, kept by C. Kizler, and two houses occupied by Germans on the corner of Shelby and Marshall. A German named John Feller was stabbed seven times, but not dangerously injured.

The next scene of the riot was on Jefferson street, near Beargrass creek. Here a party of gentlemen coming into the city was fired upon from the houses, and some of them seriously wounded. Armbruster's brewery and several houses were attacked, and the contents demolished. The brewery was afterwards fired and burned down, with several other houses. A number of window-panes in other houses were broken. Several Germans were very badly beaten, and an Irishman, named Patrick Murphy, was shot; he died this morning. On Preston street, below Main, John Sutherland, an American, was shot, but not dangerously injured, and an Irishman was shot and beaten.

All the German houses attacked were those from which shots had been fired by the occupants.

While this was going on in the upper part of the city, several persons were fired upon on the lower part of Main street. About 5 o'clock, two Americans were shot from an Irish house, while going along on Chapel street. This at once brought the excitement to the highest pitch. The Irish row, on Main street, above Eleventh, was attacked and fired, and several persons were killed and some burned. A large number were wounded. The Irishman who shot Graham while he was taking care of Rhoades, an American who had been shot, was hung, but cut down before he died. At least thirty shots were fired from houses on Chapel street. It is impossible to ascertain all that were wounded. Malvin H. Scott, American, has his arm badly shattered by a ball.

Seven or eight houses on the north side of Main street, above Eleventh, and two on the south side, were burned. A man named Richard Blackburn, who had hold of the pipe of the American Eagle Company, was shot about 3 o'clock this morning. The houses were nearly all owned by Francis Quinn, who was killed.

Later at night, one of the groceries ransacked on Madison street was burned down, and also two Irish cooper-shops on Main street. There were several German cooper-shops in the same vicinity, but none of them were burned. We are credibly informed that the mob had nothing to do with this fire.

There were some warlike demonstrations this morning on Fifth street, near Main, but better counsel prevailed, and the crowd finally dispersed.

We have given the above hastily and obtained the particulars from sources which we consider most reliable.

The coroner has held inquests on the following bodies:

William Graham, an American and foundry man, was killed on Chapel st. by being shot in the stomach on Monday evening, and died immediately. The shooting was done by an Irishman, who was shot and hung, but before life was extinct cut down. He died a few hours afterwards. He was buried, but the coroner will have his body taken up.

Theodore Rhoads, an American, aged 30, residing on Main street, below Eleventh, was shot and stabbed in the street in the Eighth ward. He leaves a family.

John Hudson, an American, residing on Green street, near Preston, was shot in the back of the head in the Eighth ward.

Powell Rothaupt, a German wagonmaker, stabbed at Schardin's precinct. Died in about eight hours afterwards. Leaves a family.

Joseph Allison, an Irish Protestant, was shot on the corner of Market and Chapel streets. He and his wife had secreted themselves under a bed, but were dragged out.

The body of Francis Quinn, an Irishman, is deposited in the court-house. The coroner has not yet held an inquest on it. He was shot in the groin.

The bodies of a man and a woman burned, both Irish and residents on Main street, above Eleventh, are also deposited in the court-house.

There is one man dead in the hospital and two are not expected to recover.

There is also an Irishman dead in the jail. A German, named Jacob, corner of Madison and Shelby, is not expected to recover.

The coroner was summoned at noon to hold an inquest on the body of an Irishman named Pat. Murphy near the brewery that was burned.
